THE COMING CASAR. There is about the Grant movement a certain air of deflance and arrogance, as though it were destined to place the neck of the Democracy under the yoke and establish the Republicans in perma-nent empire. There is, however, no man whose cardidacy inspires less un-casiness in the Democratic mind than U.S. Grant, and our only fear is that when the clacque subsides his weakness will become painfully apparent to the Republican managers. He was the light upon the Republican party and brought it from over-whelming majority down to its present minerity, as a short eview of the facts will show. When rant came into office the Republicans ad a majority in Congress of 103. There were 118 Republicans from the Northern States and 67 Democrats. The infamies of his Administrations,

In its issue the rings and pools which formed under of the 22d inst, we find advertisements every department of his government and which enjoyed his continued protection, lost to the Republican party its majority, and in the tidal-wave year gave to the Democrats a majority of St. It is true that this was in part due to the overthrow of the carpet-bag governments in the Southern States, but this took place in spite of Grant's efforts to uphold them. Even his bayonets failed to pin them upon the Southern people and his last official act was to withdraw the troops from the support of the carpet-baggers in South Carolina and Louisiana. That which was called 'Hayes' Southern policy" was simply the completion of the movement which Grant had begun and which had indeed been forced on him. His efforts to keep that fifthy horde in power in the South had lost him the support of the strongest Republican States of the North. Let percentage. The defect of this adver- the idea root itself in the Northern mind that Grant, should he be returned sufficiently precise. When the of "J. J. G. ;" but as he gives his ad. third-term movement began, in 1874, the wise heads of the Republican party foresaw a defeat for the party. > with a plank which indorsed Grant's Administration. It was inserted in spits of the advice and entreaty of the men who were again powerless in the late Saratoga Convention, which Conkling ruled. The consequence was that Dix was defeated by a majority of 50, 317—a loss to the Republicans of 102,000 votes, from which they have never recovered. The same issue was made in Pennsylvania and there the Republicans suffered a loss of 135,000 votes in 1874. Ohio, which went Republican in 1872 by 34,268, went Democratic in 1874 by 17,202-a less to the Republicans of 51,000 votes. In Indiana the Republican majority of 21,000 was lost and has never been regained. New Jersey and Connecticut were converted into Damo cratic States by the threat of a third term for Grant. These facts cannot entirely escape the memories of the Republican leaders, for it was owing to them that the third-term movement failed, and Grant went abroad to separate himself from politics for a season. He has now returned fresh from hobnobbing with princes and potentates. His imperialistic tendencies have not been weakened and he longs for irresponsible power more than ever. Every-

is equal to at least fifteen or twenty bushels of corn per acre, it is worth sav-ing from damages by early harvesting. The grain is ready to be gathered before stalks are ripe and dead. The stalk sap, which will go to complete the growth of the grain whether it is stand-ing or has been cut; for after the leaves begin to turn yellow the functions of then, as this has occurred, the corn may be cut, and after the first sero and yellow le if is seen delay is dangerous, and may be injurious. When the grain is comas to affect the growth and ripen the stubble afterward. The latter is worthy of more consideration than is usually given to it, and the harrowing of the soil and the harvesting of the following crop are frequently greatly interfered with by loose corn-roots, with a foot or more of dry stalk attached, which clog the harrows and incumber the reaping mplements or machines. If the stalks are cut low, the roots may be buried out strongthening bitters, wines or appellaof reach of the harrow, and give no fur-

. When the stalks are cut it will be found advisable to put up small shocks To PRESERVE GRAPES.—The French way. There will then be no necessity move the lime. way. There will then be no necessity to travel more than live or six feet, at the most, to gather the shock, and much loss of time and labor will be saved. The usual manner of leaving a hill uncut as a foundation for the shock is not to be commanded. to be commended. The shock may be built as firmly without this as with it. by simply sprending the base, planting each side firmly in the ground, and ty-ing securely with bands of damp ryestraw. The tying is the chief point; unless the shock is firmly bound it can-not stand firmly, and a large portion of the crop will go down at the first squall, and will generally be scaking on the ground until husking. Much avoidable loss occurs in this way, through simple neglect in binding the shock. Rapid curing brings on early husking. Early husking avoids much really painful, but generally self-inflicted, exposure to cold and wet in the field, which follow husking so late as November, when the bulk of this work is netually done. The farmer who has his corn in the crib and his cornfedder under 100f or in stack before the end of October may be sounted forehanded and happy. And there is no good reason why he should not be so, If the corn is well cured in the shock it will be a saving of much time and labor to husk into baskets and to empty these directly into the wagon-box, so that the corn may be cribbed without any further handling. The stalks may also be handed directly to the yard where they may be stacked, put under the roof of a bar rack, or stored away in an alry place in the barn. A fair husker should be able to husk at least 40 bushels per day, and many will do twice as much. With two wagons, one being loaded and one being all foul mitter fre bauled to the crib, and with five or six huskers, a team may be kept reasonably busy hauling corn, and in any possible intervals of waiting for corn a load or become the cost an anally. two of stalks may be hauled in. It will be a further saving of time if the small kt corn is thrown Into base in the field, that it may be carried in by fiself and kept separate from the good corn. In stucking or mowing the staks, ventilators may be usefully placed in the centre of the mass, by which any dampness remaining in them will be carried off. A very good ventilator may be made by setting up a few rails tied in a bdudle in the centre of the sack; the tougher the rails the better they will be for the puppose. Or three rails or poles may be featened togother by a few cross-pieces as as to form a sort of flue or chimney in the mow or stack from the bottom to the top; this will keep an open space of at least a foot wide for the escape of warm or moist air, and will prevent the mildew which is so provalent in cornfolder. Any smitty stalks that may be found sould be thrown on one side, and gathered together and burned. The sould is undoubtedly poisonous, and should never be given to cattle, more appearable to constantive properties and this consecution, warments the Company in consecutive properties. The sould is undoubtedly poisonous, and should never be consecuted by or found in any other remeity.

pounds per bushel, are less than the actual quantity. Mr. Reed says: "This ground was carofully measured and staked off, and the different seetions harvested and threshed separately, and every precaution taken to seems accurate results. The field is a ciny soil mixed with some gravel, and has been thoroughly underdrained. It was some to barley the spring before the wheal was sown, and yielded eighteen bushels to the acre. Before the wheat was harvested, the sections on which salt and guano were used looked equally as well as those sections treated with phosphate, bone dust, and ground limestone and if they had not been threshed sep-arately it would not have been possible from the appearance of the wheat to de-termine which was the best. This fact has convinced me that the only way to mrive at accurate results is to thresh separately, as in this case sections yielding thirty-seven bushels per nore looked no better than those yielding twenty.

nine bushels per acre. I think it is not improbable that fertilizers have been cademned as useless in many cases.

"In this case the ground limestone proved to be the most economical fortifizer, showing a profit over hone dust of $100 per acro; over phosphate of $1,28 per acre; over guano of $0.70 per acre; and over salt of $6.80 per acre. I am using the ground limestone on about seventy acres of whoat this fall, and hope I may not have occasion to change Cutting up of corn is usually delayed the opinion formed from the foregoing too long. Frost seriously damages the fodder, and as the feeding value of this best fertilizer for wheat. The field on best feetilizer for wheat. which the above tests were made is be-ing again sewn to wheat, with a uniform dressing of 100 pounds of bone dust and 300 of ground limestone to the acro, and will be again barvested and threshed and leaves contain a large amount of separately, to ascertain the yield of the different sections the second year." - Some years ago ground limesto for the purpose having been operated the roots are ended and the plant takes in (fettysburg; but it soon felt into dispension more from the soil. As soon, repute and was abandoned altogether. Results did not meet expectations.
